

J. Overton, Hamlet To Be or Not To Be Parody:

To vote, or not to vote: that is the question:
Whether 'tis bolder in the mind to decide
The slings and rods of outrageous candidates,
Or to allow others to decide,
And by voting Tuesday? Hillary: Trump;
'Tis choice; 'tis the country to decide
For there will be heartache for many a man
Many say neither flesh deserves
'Tis office of President. Hillary, Trump;
To vote: perchance mine right: ay peace of mind;
For in the vote is choice of man's mind
When casting consider divisions,
Must give the mind guidance: reasons
Differences o'er life makes confusion;
For all ears have beared debates,
Thus Hillary, the liberal under my weary eye,
'Tis raised taxes, government controlled insurance and abortion rights,
With pangs of pressure, confusion spins my brain
That Hillary is guilty of a crime,
When she herself might guilty make
Then Trump? he whose voice rings loud and ill,
To yell and rant a weary campaign,
But Trump, the conservative candidate,
'Tis guns, school vouchers and strict punishments ensue,
More of the mind confusion puzzles
And makes citizens ponder
Then to vote for whom?
Thus conscience confuses my soul;
And thus I envision before the vote
Sickened o'er poor choices my heart aches,
'Tis country of great need and debate
With decisions of heavy currents turning,
Go forth to yea vote in four short days- Vote I say!
Shoddy candidates! Vote the mind,
Tuesday is not far away.
