

mary's youth

a delicate heaviness upon my princess head.
father's crown, now my own. he is dead.
six years old, heir of scotland, heir of dread.
to a carriage, into france where i should wed.
“remember, you're a queen,” my mother said.

Mary Patton Murphy