

join the wave

The wave: the hype, what everyone is doing; an experience when many people share a strong feeling or attitude about something at the same time.

The tide recedes and returns.
Seniors graduate and freshmen begin, and each year sees the cycle repeat itself.

It's a wave of firsts and lasts...

Seniors realize how special high school is; they try to soak in all of their "lasts" all the while setting an example for future classes. Juniors start to discover their schoolwork getting harder and their decisions becoming more important. Sophomores are finding out who they are as they ride the wave of change. Freshman are ready to start the next chapter in their lives with an abundance of nerves. Even though we are all at a different chapter in our high school experience, we are all unified within the same orange and blue ocean.

It's a wave of excellence...

Our sports teams and extracurriculars have a long history of awards and recognition. Whether we are supporting the football team on Friday nights, serving the community for our clubs, or participating in academic competitions, we represent this school proudly as we go about our days as Admirals.

It's a wave of friends becoming family...

During these four years, we all share the challenges of difficult schoolwork, frequent disappointments, and occasional failures. Our common experiences lead to strong bonds and friendship as we ride out the rough waves together. Our shared ups and downs lead to lifelong friendships.

It's a wave of fellowship...

We come from varied backgrounds, but we are here together walking the same halls and surfing the same waves. Right now, we are all a part of the wave, the Admiral wave. No matter the background or grade, we are all unified as Admirals.

...and you'd better believe we're going to make the most of it.
