

Feminine Life By Angel Bell

Don't do this, don't do that You are a lady how could you forget That dress is hideous That's too much makeup
All your complaining does not fit
Your style is beautiful Your heart is pure is all you hear from ear to ear
But who will believe you when you feel insecure Always living up to standards of the dominating man The one who claims he'll meet each and every one of your needs And help you succeed to a life he believes You will not leave Nor turn down such a offer that seems irresistible but yet You are not stupid to know that that is in fact a threat To lure you into a trap of troubled eyes
And weeping nights crying out Why should I even fight
Who will understand that this so called friend Is only calling out commands to meet his demands Why should I lower my standards and meet his needs When I too am a person who wants to fulfill her dreams And get a degree so that I can honor myself
Myself alone, because working for a man is enough on its own Until sir charming shows some respect and honor To the true person that was once seen then I will pamper my own feelings and have pride in my journey Eventually you'll understand that I am a confident, wise Woman who never lets the minds of stupid guys Get in the way of her peaceful mind
